Brief Comments: First... this is the THIRD browser used to try to submit this form (Safari, Firefox, now Chrome). It is not working. **Please retain net neutrality**: 1) America was founded on the belief that freedom to access information without government (or corporate) gatekeepers is a constitutional right. 2) Economically, as a micro-publisher trying to sell the works of my late uncle, I would be stripped of access to customers I depend on, unless I paid a premium. Just one more unregulated bonanza for the largest players squashing out the mom and pops. Great. 3) in 2017, access to the information superhighway should be considered as a basic utility, like electricity. Not providing equal access to all content providers is regressive and puts many US citizens at an informational disadvantage. ** Thank you for considering this, and recognize for every one comment you get, 25 other people agree but weren't able to be heard.
